

The Prophecy of the False King

14 1 2

Chapter 1 by Gavin Barrett-Hayes

In the fourteen-hundred and ninety-third year of our King, a prophecy was written. Two hundred and one years later, a baby in a saddlebag cried as it was carried away from all it knew. That same day, fourteen men, young and old, died fighting to defend that young child. The prophecy was doomed to come true.

The prophecy is known as the Prophecy of the False King. Its meaning is unclear and open to debate, but it's words are as follows:

When blood does fall on the Crimson Throne,
When the last of the Speakers is a godless crone;
When a newly crowned King dies on the floor,
When all that's left is guts and gore;
When the last of the Rangers crowns his own son,
When the stone accepts it and claims that he's won;
The blood will flow and drain unto the steps,
The King will be crowned at the cost of the rest.
The blight will not spread, but it will not decline,
And the last of the Stonespeakers will know his demise.
So all that still live will come out now to say:
The Crimson Throne rises and is here now to stay.

Chapter 2 by Phantim

The prophecy seemed a lot more real now that King Jarvin the 2nd sat on the throne. The previous king, the true heir had been killed during his coronation. The victim of a 'coup d'état' by the Lord Ranger Jarvin the 1st. The rest of the rangers who were loyal to the king were killed. Lord Ranger Jarvin the 1st was mortally wounded. On his
